Shellie Grahek, general manager of Little Caesar's Pizza, is ready to unleash "hot-n-ready" pizzas as a partner in the chain's new franchise restaurant and corporate headquarters at Aspen Avenue and Kenosha Street.

"I am from Michigan and we have several restaurants up there," Grahek said. Her organization chose to open its headquarters in this area because they plan to open several locations in the Tulsa-metro area over the next several months. The projected open date of the Broken Arrow store is Nov. 9.

Recently relocated to Bixby, Grahek has been busy readying the new location with equipment and personnel.

"We have had several people apply for jobs over the past week and I should have a full crew ready very soon," Grahek said. "We are also hanging signs and getting all of our equipment in place."

Some may recall Little Caesar's former slogan, "pizza-pizza." That tag line has given way to the company's new focus on "hot- n-ready" pizzas available to carry out whenever the restaurant is open.
